Answer from top 5 papers

The popularity of companion animals among older adults, particularly those aged 60 to 90, is significant, with dogs being the most favored pets. This demographic often experiences loneliness and health challenges, making the companionship of animals particularly beneficial. The following sections outline key insights regarding pet ownership in this age group.

Popular Pets Among Older Adults

- Dogs: The most commonly adopted pets, providing companionship and emotional support (Núñez et al., 2010).
- Cats: Also popular, offering a lower-maintenance alternative to dogs (Huss, 2013).
- Other Animals: Birds and small mammals are less common but still present in some households (Johnson & Bibbo, 2015).

Benefits of Pet Ownership

- Emotional Support: Pets help alleviate feelings of loneliness and depression, enhancing overall well-being (Suthers-McCabe, 2001).
- Physical Health: Studies indicate that pet owners experience lower blood pressure and fewer doctor visits (Suthers-McCabe, 2001).
